

Commercial Activity: Education and Fitness Policies

Commercial Education and Fitness Activities are defined as:

- Educational instruction
- Advertised group instruction, coaching, or care
- With or without a fee if advertised by a business
- Examples:
  - fitness training, personal trainers, boot camps
  - childcare, day camps, supervised play
  - run groups/clubs

If you are providing fitness or educational commercial activities in one or more Portland Parks & Recreation (PP&R) parks, a permit is required and the following policies apply to your use in addition to the General Guidelines for Commercial Activity at PP&R's Outdoor Facilities.

- In addition to the application and processing fee, the permittee will be charged an hourly fee for facility usage determined by the average number of participants. Please see the General Guidelines for Commercial Activity at PP&R's Outdoor Facilities for current rates.
- These types of commercial activities may not book specific reservable locations within a park such as shelters, fields or picnic areas. If you would like to use a designated facility to operate and it is approved, you will be required to pay fees for the facilities used and required to use the process specific to the facility.

Example: Athletic facilities, such as sports fields, tennis courts, etc., would need to be requested using the Athletic Field Usage Application and would be subject to the Sports timeline with the Athletic Facility Commercial Use Fees. The same requirements will need to be met, however, the facility availability is determined by primary sport season availability instead of the commercial use process.
- Groups of 1-30 people can be accommodated in all parks. Groups of 30-60 require additional approval each time.
