To Kip's point, the Directive Review process is itself governed by a Directive. Providing PCCEP comments on that one Directive (<https://www.portland.gov/policies/police-directives/bureau-organization-0100/001000-directives-review-and-development>) is one way to influence the process itself to make it more like whatever it is PCCEP wants it to be.

I do not know if there is a character limit, it's a single input box in a SurveyMonkey form., so it's a leap of faith whether what you input actually gets captured/formatted/etc, there's a better way to have a feedback workflow

This all sounds like something the city needs to think about - if it is serious about wanting communities to actively take part in how we are governed/policed/etc - then a bridge needs to be built. Where someone or something is supplemented to explain it, examples, day to day examples, etc. Similarly how to I explain some laws to my staff when we talk about housing and homelessness, conversion, and what exactly miranda rights cover.
