Charter Review 101 Workshop

Lessons Learned from Pilot Session

- Many community members don't have a current awareness of what the city's role is in helping them
- It's critical to emphasize how community members can engage with city elected leaders
- There is an interest to learn more about proportional representation and how it works
- Onboarding education is important before the event (one-pager with an overview of the curriculum)

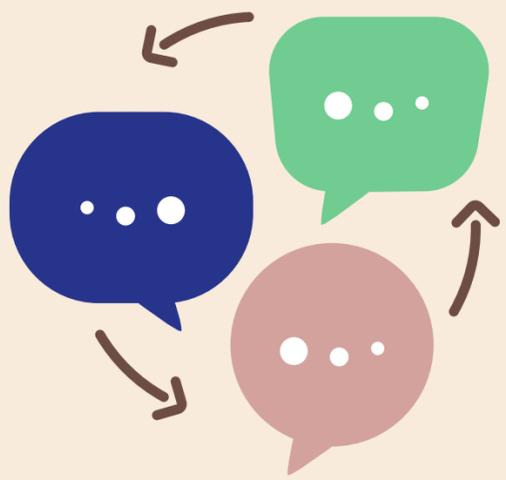

Charter Review 101

Workshop Part one Goals

- To provide community members with the foundation to understand how the Charter Review process works
- To highlight the ways our current city government and voting system are inequitable to communities of color
- To explore alternative forms of government and voting systems that can help communities of color build political power
- To guide community members in a discussion of their lived experiences interacting with our current city government and voting system

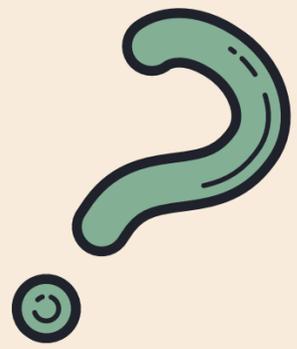

Community Discussion

- Objective:

- The goal of this community discussion is to encourage community members to name their lived experiences interacting with our city government and City Council elections as knowledge that can help us build a new system. By exploring the ways community members have been or have not been served by our city government and City Council elections, we can identify the outcomes that a new system should support.

- Factors to consider:

- Varying levels of familiarity with city government/voting system
- Expansive questions to capture participants' experiences
- How information will help to shape the Commission's recommendations

Community Discussion Questions

1. What has been your experience with our city government and has the city been responsive to your needs?
2. What makes you and your community feel represented or heard by a city elected leader?
3. What barriers do you or your friends, family, or community experience voting in our City Council elections?
4. What would make voting easier to participate in?

Commission Feedback Questions

1. Are these questions accessible enough to meet participants' at their varying levels of familiarity with city government?
2. Do these questions feel insightful to your research and what you want to know about Portlanders' experiences?
3. Is there anything else you feel strongly about that would be helpful for community members to discuss?
4. Do you have any additional impressions or feedback?
